Cavin

- 44. Built-in Collection
- 46. Free-standing Collection

The European brand, mQuvée, is specialised in wine and how to properly store it. The wine coolers and wine cabinets from mQuvée are, therefore, always equipped with UV-protected glass doors, compressor cooling and exclusive shelves made in wood.

The French are known for their wine and the Scandinavians for their design. With one foot in each region, Cavin created great wine coolers that are both stylish and good value for money. The name Cavin is a merge of the French words "cave" and "vin" referring to the French word for wine cellars - Cavin's passion!

THE FIVE GOLDEN RULES

■ Constant temperature

The secret to ideal wine storage is a constant temperature. The perfect storage temperature for all types of wine is 12 degrees, minor discrepancies are fine as long as the temperature is constant. If you are interested in storing your wine for a long time, a wine cabinet that can secure a constant temperature is the way to go. If you intend on drinking your wine within 18 months, you should invest in a wine cooler that focuses on achieving the perfect serving temperature - which is a totally separate matter.

■ No vibration

Vibration is harmful for wine and should be kept to an absolute minimum. That's why you should go for a wine cooler or cabinet with wooden shelves, as wood absorbs vibration the best. When you choose your wine cooler, make sure that you choose a model with a vibration-free compressor or a model that is fitted with a silencer.

■ No light

Wine likes to be kept in the dark! Light speeds up the wine aging process unfavourably, that's why a wine cooler or cabinet always should be equipped with a solid door or a UV protected glass door. If you are looking for a wine cooler with internal lighting, make sure to choose a model with LED lighting.

■ No bad odours

Keep your wine collection away from bad odours! Wine corks often deteriorate over time and allow odours to enter the bottle. The best way to make sure that there are no bad smells in your wine cabinet is to choose a model with good ventilation and a carbon filter. Don't forget to change your carbon filter once a year, or else it will be inefficient.

■ Appropriate humidity

In order for wine to mature correctly and develop its bouquet to its full potential, it's extremely important that the wine doesn't come into contact with air. Air easily enters a wine bottle if its cork isn't dry. Make sure to avoid damp corks by storing wine at the right humidity level between 50% and 75%. Higher humidity levels than that are likely to damage the labels of your wine bottles - which would be a shame.

WHICH WINE COOLER TO CHOOSE?

Free-standing wine cooler

Free-standing wine coolers are the most flexible type of wine coolers in terms of placement. They don't need to be built into any type of unit and can be placed about anywhere you want. Just make sure to keep 10 cm of free space around your cooler for its ventilation system to work properly.

Built-in wine cooler

Built-in wine coolers are usually installed underneath a kitchen counter. They look their best when fitted to the size of your kitchen cabinets. That's why we offer a wide selection of built-in wine coolers with 15, 30, 40, 50 and 60 cm in width; 700, 720, 780 and 800 mm in door height; and various finishes such as anthracite black, stainless steel or totally custom made according to your colour preferences.

Integrated wine cooler

Integrated wine coolers are the most exclusive looking type of wine cooler as they almost melt into your kitchen design. Integrated wine coolers are placed inside kitchen cabinets and are installed in the same way as built-in ovens. Most integrated wine coolers, nowadays, are front ventilated, which means that the ventilation is placed hidden behind the door and you don't need free space behind, above or below the cooler.

Wine cabinet

If you are interested in storing your wine collection long term, wine cabinets are the way to go. They are just like wine cellars put inside a cabinet and follow the five essential rules of wine storage: constant temperature, no bad smells, no vibration, no light, and an appropriate humidity level.

mQuvée

Passion for wine. Wine for passion.

For hundreds of years, European wine producers have put their heart and soul into selecting grapes, harvesting and refining their yearly crops to create the perfect wine.

A delicate work of decades which requires a lot of knowledge passed down through generations. When the bottle of wine finally leaves the winery it's not only the result of carefully selected grapes and hard work. It is the result of hundreds of years of history, heritage and endless passion.

One single mistake in the production or ageing process will ruin years of work and more importantly, several bottles of well tasting wine. That is why we kindly ask you to store your wine as it deserves.

Wine growers are specialized in growing the grapes and making the wine, but as mQuvée, we also put our pride in creating the best possible home preservation solutions for your precious bottles. Our wine cabinets are made to perfectly replicate the conditions of a wine cellar, in order for your wine to flourish and age with dignity. In other words, when you store your bottles in an mQuvée you can always be certain that the bottles are protected from temperature changes, vibrations, sunlight, unpleasant odours and kept at an ideal humidity level.
